

There are many good stories told about the deplorable fashion of conferring on the winners at cards, but it remained for a tiny maiden of five years in Salt Lake to characterize the ordinary card party in the proper way. She was playing various games with a large assembly of dolls, and after the morning calls, sick bed experiences, etc., that usually befall such an assembly she said: "Now you all sit up at the table and we'll have a prize fight." "What is that?" asked the astounded mother from her desk. "Why," was the rather doubtful response, "isn't that what you call it when ladies come for prizes?"

The "telephone" is to be the thing of the autumn. The gentle art of writing invitations has gone out decidedly and the gentler art of answering them seems to be a thing of the past. The only way, therefore, is to get a friend at the phone and obtain the answer then and there. Hence, when one asks you for the meaning of a "telephone tea" don't think of all the wires as being crossed, but decide that it is a tea to which you are bidden by word of mouth.

One poor father was heard to offer his daughter $1,000 cash if she would make her home when the time comes, an eloquent.

There is one of the most natured and most popular girls in town whose superstitious feelings have all been trampled upon many times. Now she is to officiate at at least two more weddings during the autumn and yet she seems to have no fears on the subject. Maybe she thinks she is escaping some calamity.

For the first time in many months the Ladies' Literary club comes forward Tuesday next asking for public patronage that it may give to the public the benefit thereof. The small working section of the club which has been foremost in civic improvement, always has undertaken some special lines of advancement in beautifying and cleaning the city streets. The money derived from the excursion to be given Tuesday at Saltair will be the beginning of a fund for the prosecution of this work, and the section members under the leadership of Mrs. Ledyard M. Bailey, the chairman, are working earnestly for the success of the day. Tickets may be obtained from any of the members.

Two or three of the more modest clerks in a popular drug store were driven almost to nervous prostration a few evenings ago by the unusual sight of a maiden, well known in social circles, carrying what appeared to be an abbreviated petticoat of fine white material with a tiny edging of suitable embroidery. It was one of those trifling little coats affected by the ruling fashion which she had tucked under her arm, presumably for a rainy day or a quiet evening.

I am sure I have excellent reasons for saying so, when I declare, That this, the best of all seasons For the girl who has "nothing to wear,"—Life.

The matter of women smoking seems to be giving that old lady vegetarian a great deal of trouble. One would think to read her views on the subject, that good cigars were made of minerals. DOHL BARET.

CURRENT EVENTS IN LOCAL SOCIETY CIRCLES

Invitations were issued during the week for the marriage of Miss Stella Salisbury and Louis McCormick, September 4. The wedding will be an elaborate affair, not a reception, the guests being bidden to the marriage ceremony. Bishop Laurence Scanlan will read the service of the Roman Catholic church at 9 p. m. The bride will be attended by Miss Anna McCormick, sister of the groom as maid of honor, and the five bridesmaids are to be Miss Laura Sherman, Miss Gertrude McGrath, Miss Katherine Judge, Miss Eleanor Pope of Philadelphia and Miss Genevieve McCormick. MOTHER'S CRADLE SONG.

It seems to me I hear it yet,
My mother's cradle song.
Although the years since mother sang
Are plentiful and long,
I see her there in memory,
She rocks the cradle slow,
And now that little lullaby
Comes to me soft and low:
Go to sleep my baby,
To sleep my dear,
Mother watches o'er you,
There is naught to fear,
Go to sleep my baby,
Board the ship of sand,
On the Sea of Dreamland
Sail to Slumberland.

The baby's gone to sleep at last,
The cradle's ceased its sway,
Now mother takes me in her arms,
As 'round the shadows play,
She rocks me close upon her breast,
And then it seems so long,
A worn-out youngster falls asleep,
To mother's cradle song.

Tonight I'd give all I possess,
Could I but hear her song,
The little song which, in my ears,
At present seem to ring,
I'd give it all if she'd come back,
Even though 'twere not for long,
And sing a tired man to sleep,
To mother's cradle song.
